Dr. CHEEVER'S ELECTRIC BELT, or Regeners

tor, is made expressly for the cure of derangement of the procreative organs. Whenever any debility of the generative organs occurs, from whatever cause the continuous stream of electricity permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy ac tion. There is no mistake about this instrumer

Years of use have tested it, and thousands of cures are testified to. Weakness from Indiscretion, Incapacity, Lack of Vigor, Sterility—in fact, any trouble of these organs is cured. Do not confound this with electric belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe: This is for the ONE specified purpose. For cir-

Gentlemen's Dress on New Year's Day." From the Philadelphia Times. Gentlemen making calls during the day will wear their promenade suits. This style of toilet favors the diagonal cloth of deep black. The favors the diagonal cloth of deep black. The coat is a cut-away, with a single-breasted vest of the same goods. Fashion is rather liberal as to the style of pantaloons, so far as the material is concerned. Stripes, plaids, and neat cross-bars are given in these London patterns. The dude style of trousers are passe. Any style of fancy scarf, standing collar, with plain shirt bosom, tan-colored or pearl-gray kid gloves with white stitched backs. Overcoats lined with fur should be laid off in the carriage or in the hall. There are top coats with rich fur facwith fur should be laid off in the carriage or in the hall. There are top coats with rich fur facings, the collars and cuffs of the same. The style for evening dress is quite different. This fashion of toilet is only worn after the day is over. The coat is the long-favored swallow-tail, a style that is unbecoming to most gentlemen. However, it is the preferred mode, and hence worn on all grand occasions. The material is generally fine broadcloth, and the trousers are also of this goods. The vest is often richly embroidered, if made of white satin. White Marseilles vests are fashlonable. Some prefer white sitk. These fancy styles are for young gentlemen; elderly gentlemen generally select black satin or black cloth vests. The necktie should be white or pale-tinted silk. Creamy white silk mufflers are fashlonable for evening wear, with black silk hats and very pale-colored with black silk hats and very pale-colored

A Burglar's Terrible Plight.

STICKING FAST HALF WAY DOWN A CHIMNEY AND NEARLY ROASTED TO DEATH.

Leander Smith, a young man, on Monday night resorted to the novel mode of breaking into the store of Mr. Pugh, at Clinton, N. C., by going down the chimney. He undressed himself and had descended half way down the store and made a rousing fire in the immove further. Mr. Pugh happened to come in the store and made a rousing fire in the immove chimney and blistered Smith and he roared for the same day to the pleasure of some favored mortals on the pleasure of some favored mortals on the earth's crust. The occultations take place at the same time that the close conjunctions already referred to occur in this vicinity, the phenomena occurring near midday, and of course being invisible. Observers on the evening of the 24th will find that Jupiter has survived the occultation, and is self and had descended half way down the chimney when he stuck fast and could not move further. Mr. Pugh happened to come in the store and made a rousing fire in the immense old fire place. The flames leaped up the chimney and blistered Smith and he roared for Hewitt, A. S., N. Y., Wormley's.

A Convict Falls Heir to an Estate.—
George Bell, a convict in the Maryland penitentiary, is said to have tallen heir to a considerable estate by the death of his mother in New York. He was convicted of forging checks by which the banks of Baltimore lost $15,000. He was convicted in 1881 and sentenced for ten years, so that he has upward of four years yet to serve. A lawyer from New York is in Baltimore to look after his interest and an effort will be made to secure his pardon. His good conduct will reduce his term of imprisonment.

AN INSULTING BULLY KILLED.—Samuel Blake was stabbed and almost instantly killed late Monday night by Ernest Brattan, near Girdle Thee Hill, Worcester county, Md. Brattan was escorting a girl from a party, when Blake made an insulting remark and after a few words struck Brattan in the mouth. She latter drew a knife and stabbed his opponent in the neck, severing the jugular vein. He made no effort to escape and was lodged in jail.

THREE COMETS AND A NEWLY DISCOVERED THREE COMETS AND A NEWLY DISCOVERED STAR.—Prof. Swift, of Warner observatory in Rochester, N. Y., on Saturday evening received a telegram from Prof. Brooks, of Phelps, announcing the discovery of another comet. It was unexpectedly discovered by Prof. Barnard at Nashville. It is in the constellation of Aquita. This discovery secures Prof. Brooks the second Warner prize of $200 for 1885. Prof. Swift Saturday evening observed Barnard's and the Paris comets. He also found a star of the sixth magnitude. Barnard's comet has a tail about two degrees, thirty longitudes. The Paris comet is brighter, but has no tail.

THE NEW YEAR'S SKY. Interesting Planetary Display January.

From the Providence Journal. Venus is evening star and easily wins the first place on the January record, for, during the month, she puts on her brightest aspect. On the 13th, at 12 o'clock, she reaches her point of greatest brilliancy as evening star. There are two of these periods of greatest brilliancy. One occurs thirty-six days before inferior conjunction when she is evening star, as in the present case. The other occurs thirtysix days after inferior conjunction when she is morning star. On the first of these occasions she is 40° east of the sun; on the second she is 40° west of the sun. She takes on the form, when evening star, of a waning crescent, and, when morning star, of a waxing crescent, In both cases about one-fourth of her disc is illumined. Venus, at superior conjunction, has her whole bright face turned towards us, but she is so far away that her diameter is only 10". As she advances towards the earth, less and less of her illumined disc is turned towards us. But her increasing size more than accurate less than the contract of the her increasing size more than counterbalances the loss of light, and she grows more and more bright until she reaches her period of greatest brilliancy. After that event the loss of light more than counterbalances the increasing di-mensions, and her light grows dim, until at in-ferior conjunction, she is lost to sight as she passes between us and the sun, her diameter being then about 64". After inferior conjunction, as morning star, she repeats the same process in reversed order.

There is no need of calling attention to this fascinating planet during the month, for no one can look at the western twilight sky without feeling the influence of her gracious presence or without wishing to imprison her there for ever. This superb star will repay close watching in her present phase. She casts a percepti-ble shadow in the evening, and is visible at noonday to the naked eye as an intense white point to those who know her position in regard to the sun. Under favorable atmospheric conditions, she is a charming telescopic object, taking on the form of a beautiful crescent, and growing larger, sharper and thinner as she apparently approaches the sun, and really approaches the sun is plainly evident to intelligent observers who watch her appearance from night to night. Her light will be lost in the evening sky, 36 days after she glows, in her brightest colors, and 584 days will pass before she comes round again to her present position. Venus lacks but one element for making her present conditions for observation as favorable as possible. She is not in her highest northern declination, although she is turning her steps rapidly northward. Venus sets on the 1st a few minutes after 8 o'clock in the evening; on the 31st she sets about a quarter after 7 o'clock. Saturn is evening star. He wins the second place on the monthly record, for he is the sole planet visible in the early evening sky in the eastern portion of the heavens, and is almost bright enough to dispute the starry supremacy with his fairer rival, Venus, who holds her court in the west. He has this advantage, that while she sinks below the horizon about three hours after support he graces the sky the live. hours after sunset, he graces the sky the live long night, shining serenely among the bril-liant galaxy of stars that sparkle in the winter heavens, one among them, but not of them. For while they pierce the sky-depths with their own inherent light, his light is borrowed from a sun far less in size than many of the bright points gleaming around him. Saturn is still beautiful to behold, for though perihelion and opposition have passed, he has not yet reached his highest northern declination. He scarcely changes his position during the month in his slow retrograde course. On the 10th Saturn occults New Geminorum, a star of the third magnitude. Unfortunately the phenomenon occurs at 5 o'clock in the morning, when Saturn is too near the western horizon for observation, during the night. The occultation of a large star by a planet is a rare occurrence, and observers are fortunate who are so situated as to behold the sight. Saturn sets on the 1st about quarter before 7 o'clock in the morning; on a quarter before 7 o'clock in the morning; on the 31st he sets about half-past 4 o'clock.

Jupiter is morning star. Those who watch the breaking of the dawn will find Jupiter a superb object in the morning sky, brightly glimmering in the rosy or golden light that heralds the sun's approach, as he looks down from his high position near the zenith. Jupiter and Uranus, who have long been near each other, meet and pass on the celestial road. The conjunction takes place on the 24th, at eight o'clock in the morning. Jupiter, at that time, being 1° 51' northwest of Uranus.

Our brother-planet is becoming more favor-

Our brother-planet is becoming more favorably situated for observation as he approaches the earth. Astronomers have already begun to the earth. Astronomers have already begun to take advantage of the improved conditions. Mr. Denning, a specialist in Jovian interpretation, describes a view of the famous red spots obtained on the morning of the 25th of October. The spot was more plainly visible than it was on the 8th of July, his latest observation before the planet's conjunction with the sun. It was, however, not so dark as the equatorial belt, nor nearly so conspicuous as it was five or six years. nearly so conspicuous as it was five or six years ago. He found it distinct, notwithstanding the low altitude of Jupiter, and that it retained much of its original form and size. This marking has now been observed for seven years, and its present aspect seems to foretell that its existence will be indefinitely prolonged. It may, therefore, be regarded as a feature of singular permanency. The prospect is that during the ensuing opposition it will attract general observation. Astronomers have always the excitement, that something unexpected may citement that something unexpected may reward their patient work. It may be that reward their patient work. It may be that during the present year light may dawn upon the meaning of the mysterious red spots, so long a mooted question. Amateur observers sometimes find prizes where scientists fail, and astronomical victories are gained by those who have not won the laurels of the conqueror. Jupiter rises on the 1st a few minutes before half-past 11 o'clock in the evening; on the 31st he rises about half-past 9 o'clock.

Mars is morning star. He keeps on his months.

Mars is morning star. He keeps on his monotonous course, meeting with nothing of importance on his way, but growing larger and taking on a more ruddy tint as he draws near the earth. Mars rises on the 1st soon after 10 o'clock in evening; on the 31st he rises about half-past eight o'clock. Mercury is morning star. He is at his greatest western elongation on the 8th at 7 o'clock in the morning. He is then 23° 26' west of the sun, and were it not for his great southern de-A. H. Garland, Attorney General, 1315 clination would be plainly visible in the morning sky before sunrise. A sharp-eyed observer, mg sky before sunrise. A sharp-eyed observer, who knows his exact position, may succeed in finding him. Mercury rises on the 1st at half-past five o'clock in the morning; on the 31st he rises about a quarter after six o'clock.

Uranus is morning star. His conjunction with Jupiter on the 21st has already been referred to. Uranus rises on the 1st soon after half-past eleven o'clock in the evening; on the half-past eleven o'clock in the evening; on the 31st he rises about half-past nine o'clock. Neptune is evening star. At the close of the

Mr. Pugh happened to come in the store and made a rousing fire in the immense old fire place. The flames leaped up the chimney and blistered Smith and he roared for help. A party came to his assistance and with the aid of a windlass the burglar was drawn up, but not before he had been almost roasted. Smith confessed his guilty intention and agreed to accept a sound flogging.

GLADSTONE IRRITATED AT THE LIBERALS.—It is reported that Mr. Gladstone has decided to await the production of the conservatives local government measure before revealing the limiting parallels of $8° and 86° north latitude. The moon also occults Aldebaran. The occultation takes place on the 16th, at 2h. 4m. p. m., Washington mean time—an bears testimony to a quiescent condition of the sun's family. All days are not field days, and our celestial brothers pursue their tireless course with but few meetings and partings on the road. Those who follow closely the movements of the planets learn to take a warm personal interest in these celestial wanderers, and feel for them a kind of reverential friendship, a kind of personal ownership, as it were. Especially is this the case with the three planets that will brightly shine in the January sky. Venus, to lovers of the stars, is the queen, the fairest of them all. Jupiter is the symbol of royalty, and Saturn is the magnificent potentate among the brotherhood. Venus in the west, Saturn in the east in the early evening, and Jupiter looking down from beyond the zenith in the early dawn, will crown the star-lit beauty of moonless nights throughout the first month of the new year. our celestial brothers pursue their tireless course

Spontaneous Hydrophobia Paris Dispatch to the London Daily News.
Dr. Dujardin Beaumetz has read before the Dr. Dujardin Beaumetz has read before the Hygienic society a paper on what he regards as a well established case of "spontaneous hydrophobia" in a man aged twenty-nine. Not only did all the symptoms which characterize that malady declare themselves, but the matter taken from the patient's body when he died communicated it to rabbits inoculated therewith. The patient declared on entering the Hotel Dieu that he had not been bitten or scratched by a dog or any other animal, nor been in any sort of contact with one. The body was minutely examined before and after death and the skin was everywhere intact. Negotiations are proceeding with China for a rearrangement of the boundary between China and Burmah.

The Dead of 1885. A LONG BOLL OF DISTINGUISHED MEN AND WOMEN DIE AT HOME AND ABROAD.

The sudden death of William H. Vanderbilt the powerful railroad magnate and millionaire following closely the death of the Vice President of the United States, and that of Alfonso, he young king of Spain, brings forcibly to mind the fact that the list of distinguished names that already swell the death-roll of 1885 is an unusually long one. It embraces names famous in every walk of life and in all lands; of all creeds and tongues; scholars, soldiers, ar-tists; veterans of many years of honorable usefulness, and names young in years and fame, but rich in promise—all are represented in the long roll of the illustrious dead.

Mystery in Connecticut. THE BODY OF A MARRIED LADY FOUND IN A

A special to the New York World from New Haven, December 25, says: Newtown, the pleasant little village on the Housatonic railroad so much sought after by pleasure seekers in summer, has a genuine mystery. Mrs. Mary McCarthy, a resident of the town and a lady of good character, left her home last Wednesday and was not seen until to-day, when her body was found in a shallow stream emptying into the Housatonic, near Newtown. How the woman ever came to get into the river no one knows. As the woman lived happily, the idea of suicide is not thought of. On each side of the stream were a long row of alder bushes. If the woman went through these bushes in any way they would have been broken. As nothing of this sort was discovered the conclusion has become general that shows forced into the river. On Wednesday night she went into the town and bought a pair of chickens for Christmas and was soon by many who know the river. was seen by men who knew her walking along the road that skirts the stream in which her body was found. When the body was taken from the water it was found entirely free from ruises. Medical Examiner Wile was notified.
